

Hello from Outspan Inn – November 2009

www.outspaninn.co.za

Port St Johns has been wet, very wet – sun has been a rare commodity. But that seems to be over, and everything is incredible shades of green. Very lush, very tropical. Movie makers have come and gone, and everybody is now gearing up for the mad December rush.

While the film crew were here I had some very worried non-film guests come to see me – they had overheard a conversation about a murder in the forest – they were very relieved to hear that it was the movie plot that had been discussed! Quite a few of our locals got to play soldiers and look very macho.

Room #1 was recently upgraded, it is now a Suite, complete with a mini kitchen.

Yellow ground orchids, 'Eulophia speciosa' on our beach.

Quite a few developments are happening in PSJ, thanks to decent contractors being given the job.

New street lights have been erected, along the river mouth, and all the way to Second Beach, where a pedestrian walkway has also been laid. The walkway from the bridge to town was handed over to competent contractors, and is just about finished, which will make running and cycling along the river pleasurable.

We hosted the NSRI First Aid trainers from Durban, who were here to train the new NSRI recruits. Station 28 now has 5 new members.

Mr Big Boy, the semi resident Samango monkey, has been joined by “Mrs Big Boy and two adolescents.

Come to PSJ and enjoy the beach and the surf!
